Undergraduate courses taught

* Social Neuroscience, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, 2005, 2006.

* Introductory Neuroscience, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007.

* Evolutionary Approaches to Human Behaviour, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007.

Introduction to Cognitive Neuroscience, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2001, 2002, 2003.

Evolutionary Approaches to Human Behavior, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2001, 2002.

Social Neuroscience, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2001, 2002.

Social Psychology, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, Winter and Autumn Quarters 1999.

Cognitive Neuroscience, Department of Psychology, University of California, Santa Barbara, Winter 1997.

* Indicates courses for which I was not only the instructor, but also the Course Coordinator for large undergraduate courses, organizing tutorials (a.k.a. discussion section and labs), and training teaching assistants. DU had small enough classes that we did not have discussion sections or labs – 35 was my largest class at DU.

Graduate courses taught

Note: The university system in Australia is quite different from that in the U.S. Ph.D. students do only research, and do not take coursework, so I did no graduate teaching while at the University of Queensland.

Behavioral Neurology: Theory and Skills in Neuropsychology, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003.

Social Neuroscience, Dept. of Psychology, University of Denver, 1999, 2001, 2002.

Evolutionary Approaches to Psychology, graduate seminar, Dept. of Psychology, University of Denver, Autumn Quarter 1999, 2002.

Cognitive Neuroscience, Dept of Psychology, University of California, Santa Barbara, Winter Quarter 1997.

Evolution and Cognition, Psychology Department, University of Michigan, Fall Semester 1990.

Trainees

Postdoctoral research fellows

Paula Beall, Developmental Postdoctoral Training Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2002-2003. Effects of perceiving eye gaze and emotional expression on visual attention.

Doctoral dissertation students

Catherine Hynes, School of Psychology, University of Queensland. Clinical psychology PhD program. PhD awarded December 2009. Quantifying social deficits in individuals with head injury.

Donna Pinsker, School of Psychology, University of Queensland. Research PhD program. In 2007, when I was planning to leave UQ, Dr. Pinsker changed supervisors to Dr. Ken McFarland to complete the dissertation project begun with me. PhD awarded June 2009. Social competence and vulnerability in older adults and people with dementia.

Ben Yerys, Developmental Cognitive Neuroscience Program and Clinical Psychology Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, Ph.D. awarded June, 2005. Graded representations and performance on executive function tasks in autism.

Steve Forssell, Developmental Psychology Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver. Ph.D. awarded July 2004. Sex differences, sexual orientation and jealousy.

Master's thesis students

Melody Combs, Social Psychology Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, M.A. awarded January, 2005. (PhD in social psychology awarded December 2008.) The effects of estrogen on frontal lobe executive function.

Nicole Erlich, Social Psychology Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, M.A. awarded August, 2004. (Went on to pursue PhD in developmental psychology) Theory of mind and folk biology in autism and typical development.

Lila Kopelioff, Developmental Cognitive Neuroscience Program and Clinical Psychology Program, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, M.A. awarded January 2004. (PhD in clinical psychology awarded August 2008.) Configural vs. feature-based face processing in autism.

Honours* theses supervised – University of Queensland

* Honours is a separate degree in the Australian university system, after the B.A./B.S., but before an M.A. Psychology Honours graduates can become licensed psychologists in Australia. Such psychologists list their credentials as, for example, Joe Jones, B.A. Hons., Psychologist.

Theresa Scott, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2006. (Went on to pursue a research PhD in geriatric psychology)

Anna Cook, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2006. (Went on to pursue a research PhD in social psychology.)

Louise Kelso, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2006. (Went on to pursue an MA in clinical psychology)

Eleni Dracakis, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2006. (Went on to practice as a clinical psychologist in Queensland, Australia)

Freya Combes, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated with First Class Honours December, 2005. (Went on to pursue an MA in clinical psychology)

Tirta Susilo, School of Psychology, University of Queensland graduated with First Class Honours December, 2005. (Went on to pursue a PhD in cognitive psychology)

Penny Kempton, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2005. (Went on to practice as a clinical psychologist in New South Wales, Australia)

Caroline Gregory, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December 2005. (Went on to pursue a Ph.D. in clinical psychology)

Danielle Snadden, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated with First Class Honours December, 2004. (Went on to practice as a school psychologist in Queensland, Australia)

Andrea Petriwskyj, School of Psychology, University of Queensland, graduated December, 2004. (Went on to pursue a PhD in geriatric studies)

Undergraduate honors thesis students – University of Denver

Marisa Sellinger, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, graduated June 2003. (Went on to pursue a research PhD in developmental psychology)

Shafee Jones-Wilson, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, graduated June 2002.

Christia Johnson, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, graduated June 2001. (Went on to pursue an MA in counseling psychology)

Elizabeth Weinberger, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, graduated June 1999. (Went on to pursue a law degree)

Undergraduate Projects supervised, University of Denver “Partners in Scholarship” Program

Marisa Sellinger, A cross-cultural study of social vulnerability and gullibility in autism, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, anticipated completion date, June 2003. ($1000 research award)

Christopher Corey and Daniel Ruggles, Pitch, music and emotion perception in an individual with congenital amusia, co-supervised with Dr. Catherine Reed, Department of Psychology, University of Denver, 2001-2002. ($1000 research award)

Ian Holtum, A multimedia tool for teaching evolution, Departments of Psychology and Digital Media Studies, University of Denver, 2001-2002. ($750 research award)
